

Wednesday, May 27th, 2015
LSC 3 - Life Sciences Centre
2350 Health Sciences Mall
12-1pm

Dr. Ed Conway

*Professor of Medicine, UBC
Director, UBC Centre for Blood Research*

“Complement coagulation conundrums”

The two major blood-borne proteolytic cascades, complement and coagulation, cooperate to protect organisms against bleeding and infection. The past decade has seen major advances in delineating the molecular links between these systems that have resulted in at least one successful therapy for otherwise devastating diseases. I will discuss new pathways that are being uncovered in our lab that hopefully will yield effective new therapies.